DIDJA HEAR THIS ONE?

Fourteen-year-old Ira was getting the business from his friends.

"You kissed Sheila on the mouth last night," said one little boy. "You're a sissy."

"I am not, you notice I kissed her at night, don't you? The only reason I kissed her was to see the sparks fly off the braces on our teeth!"

A peddler came to Uncle Henry's door and rang his bell.

"Would you like to buy a letter opener?" Asked the peddler.

"What—buy one?" Uncle Henry said. "I'm married to one."

Man: "Help, get me out of here. Help!"

Passerby: "Excuse me sir, did you fall into that manhole?"

Man: "Of course not, I just happened to be standing here when they built the pavement around me."

Mr. Smith: "Jeeves, please prepare the blue room for my wife's mother. She's coming here for a long visit. Also, give a list of her favorite dishes to the cook."

Butler: "Yes sir."

Mr. Smith: "And tell the cook, the first time she serves one of them—she's fired."

A hobo went up to a farmhouse and knocked at the door.

"Lady would you help a poor, needy man out of his misery."

"Certainly," said the farmer's wife. "Would you prefer to be shot or hit with an ax."

The Most Beautiful Girls in the World

They say that three's a crowd, but we're sure you wouldn't mind being crowded by these lovelies. But in case you'd like a little more privacy, you can meet each of them alone in the pages to come.

Maybe it's illegal... Maybe it's outlawed But with results like this...WHO CARES!

Banned from the tracks by every major oil company, (yet used in the fleet of a world famous auto rental system*, as well as used in motor pools of some of the nation's largest corporations whose names read like a "who's who" of Industry) — here is the full story behind science's new miracle-invention that gives you up to 500 miles from a single tank of gas — saves you up to 50 gallons of gas each month — up to $200 on gas each year!

In fact, when it was first tested on the same proving grounds and in the same test-laboratories used by Ford, GM and Chrysler... results were so overwhelming that nation-wide press releases by America's leading automotive authorities immediately hailed this great new breakthrough!

"MATCH ME — I DARE YOU"— AND WE DID! This is the test that left the experts gasping in disbelief. The day we took a big luxurious Cadillac sedan... and pitted it in an ECONOMY RUN against a so-called "economy car"... this small Plymouth. The only change we made in the Cadillac... it was fitted out with the amazing new invention the GT ENERGY CHAMBER, described on this page. Result of test? The Cadillac boosted its miles per gallon by so much, it actually OUTPERFORMED the Plymouth... left it standing bone-dry, panting for even a glass of gasoline. For full documented proof of just how this amazing new invention can save you up to $200 in gasoline in the next 12 months... read the rest of this page. (Test conducted on the New England Turnpike—results sealed and attested to by official state notary.)

6 months ago, for perhaps the first time in history, the United States Government issued patent protection to an invention that has been classified ILLEGAL! Sound strange? Not really... here's why:

I'm sure you're familiar with the famous gasoline-economy tests run by all major oil companies. Well, do you know that the remarkable new invention described on this page is actually banned from these tests because it is TOO EFFECTIVE! Do you know that because this invention saves so much gasoline... because it gives so much economy, it is actually ILLEGAL for a test-driver to fit one on his car! And do you know that because it boosts gasoline mileage up to 11 more miles per gallon... it is actually outlawed in every recognized cross-country economy test... simply because the officials who conduct these tests have been forced to rule that it gives all cars that have it AN UNFAIR ADVANTAGE!

In other words if you are a person planning on entering one of these cross-country economy runs... then this message is not for you. YOU JUST WON'T BE ALLOWED TO USE THIS NEW INVENTION — SORRY, BUT IT'S SIMPLY ILLEGAL. But — if you are interested in getting more miles per gallon than you ever dreamed possible — and doing it the very same way that many of America's leading corporations are doing at this very moment—then what you are about to read is perhaps the most thrilling and exciting news in automotive history!

NOW GET UP TO 11 MORE MILES PER GALLON

The name of this great new invention is the GT ENERGY CHAMBER... and there is no better way to describe to you the increased performance and economy it will give you... than to tell you of the "bombshell effect" it had on research scientists and test-drivers, who simply refused to believe their own gasoline gauges when they first tried it out. Look:

CUTS GASOLINE COSTS TO AS LITTLE AS 1¢ A MILE

1. When the GT Energy Chamber was first tested by the same research laboratories used by Ford, General Motors and Chrysler... results were so overwhelming, (a staggering increase of up to 67 per cent)... it actually lowered gasoline costs to as little as one cent a mile!

2. When tests were made by a second giant auto rental system* with this incredible money saving invention... and then test-run on the road and on such world famous proving grounds as the Indianapolis Speedway... the test-drivers of these vehicles were absolutely amazed to see these big 8 cylinder sedans get better gas-mileage than small European economy cars!

3. When RCA, General Electric and some of the nation's largest taxi fleets tested this great new invention to determine just how much gas it would save them... results were so dramatic, that within 30 days they reported savings of HUNDREDS and HUNDREDS OF gallons of gas the very first month alone!

Even more startling... when one of the world's largest fleet owners*... tested this amazing G. T. ENERGY CHAMBER (to prove to themselves how much money they could save) the proof was so convincing, so dramatic, that they ordered entire fleets of cars IMMEDIATELY EQUIPPED; that's the kind of miracle-mileage this thrilling new invention delivers.

IMAGINE! ALMOST 500 MILES OF DRIVING FROM A SINGLE TANK OF GAS!

Yes, from road tests, laboratory tests, tests by one of the world's most famous test drivers... come reports of cars that drive for hundreds and hundreds of miles ON A SINGLE TANK OF GAS! Reports of test cars from Ford, General Motors, Chrysler that get more miles per gallon today than when they were brand new! Reports of big, luxury sedans that outweigh small European cars by a full ton... yet get better gas mileage, and huge dollar savings thanks to this new miracle invention.

IF IT WORKS SUCH MILEAGE MIRACLES, HOW COME THE CAR MANUFACTURERS HAVEN'T INSTALLED THIS TYPE OF UNIT IN THEIR CARS — THE ANSWER IS THAT TWO ALREADY HAVE!

By now you are probably wondering just what is the GT ENERGY CHAMBER... and how does it work? To make a long story short... if you were to look under the hood of one of those $20,000 European luxury cars like the Maseratti or the Aston-Martin, you would see sitting right behind the carburetor... a special gasoline BOOSTER unit... especially designed to extract more blazing power, more energy, from each gallon of gasoline. This remarkable booster-unit is what gives these cars such magnificent performance... such TOTAL POWER... increased engine efficiency.

And this is precisely what the GT ENERGY CHAMBER is designed to do — enable your engine to extract more piston-driving power, more raw, blazing energy and more gasoline economy... ONLY, instead of costing $100 to $150 (like the European booster-units)... the GT ENERGY CHAMBER costs but a mere fraction.

That's because after years of intensive research, automotive experts have finally found a way to simplify the mileage-boosting principle of these booster units... reduce the number of parts in each unit... mass produce them... and make them available at a price so low it's almost too ridiculous to mention. Why, do you realize what this means to you if you are determined to save yourself up to $16 a month on your gas bills... up to 50 gallons of gas each month... yes, up to $200 a year on wasted gasoline?

INSTALLS IN MINUTES — PAYS FOR ITSELF IN AS LITTLE AS 15 DAYS

It means that no matter what kind of car you now have... no matter how old that car may be... from this day on, you, too, can now save up to 500 gallons of gas each and every year. NOW you, too, can drive for hundreds of miles at a time without ever stopping at a service station. NOW you, too, can drive across 6 states of the union on just a single tank of gas... blaze a trail from New York to Chicago on just 2 or 3 tankfuls... perform mileage-miracles that only yesterday you thought were utterly impossible.

Take advantage of the most significant automotive discovery of our age. Achieve the same wondrous results as America's largest automotive fleet owners, giants of industry, Indianapolis test-drivers, and research scientists. If you can spare the few minutes it takes to attach this brilliant new discovery to your car, then take advantage of this special Free-trial introductory offer.

PROVE IT TO YOURSELF AT OUR RISK

Now the price of the GT ENERGY CHAMBER on this special introductory trial offer is not the 15 or 20 dollars you might expect... but only $6.95. LEADING DIGEST REPORTS BIG AUTOMOTIVE BREAKTHROUGH

Recently, scientists at one of the world's leading oil companies discovered a new way to save as much as 35 gallons a month on the gasoline your car burns. Working in complete secrecy for over 15 years, these men had been assigned to find out once and for all just how much mileage could actually be coaxed from an automobile engine.

After thousands upon thousands of experiments, they discovered that by simply feeding the gasoline to the engine in a new and different way they were able to get as much as 34 miles or more from every gallon of gas.

So revolutionary was this breakthrough that the Digest featured the sensational news NOT ONCE... but in two separate issues — AND THAT WAS ONLY THE BEGINNING; because when another group of experts took this "forced-feeding" concept... altered it... tested it... and improved it even more... they boosted gasoline mileage to a staggering 36% on 7 and 8-year-old cars... and as much as 61% on later model cars.

What you see on this page is the full, thrilling story behind this new wonder-invention... and how you, too, may obtain up to 7, 9 even 11 more miles per gallon... and do it without changing a single part on your car!

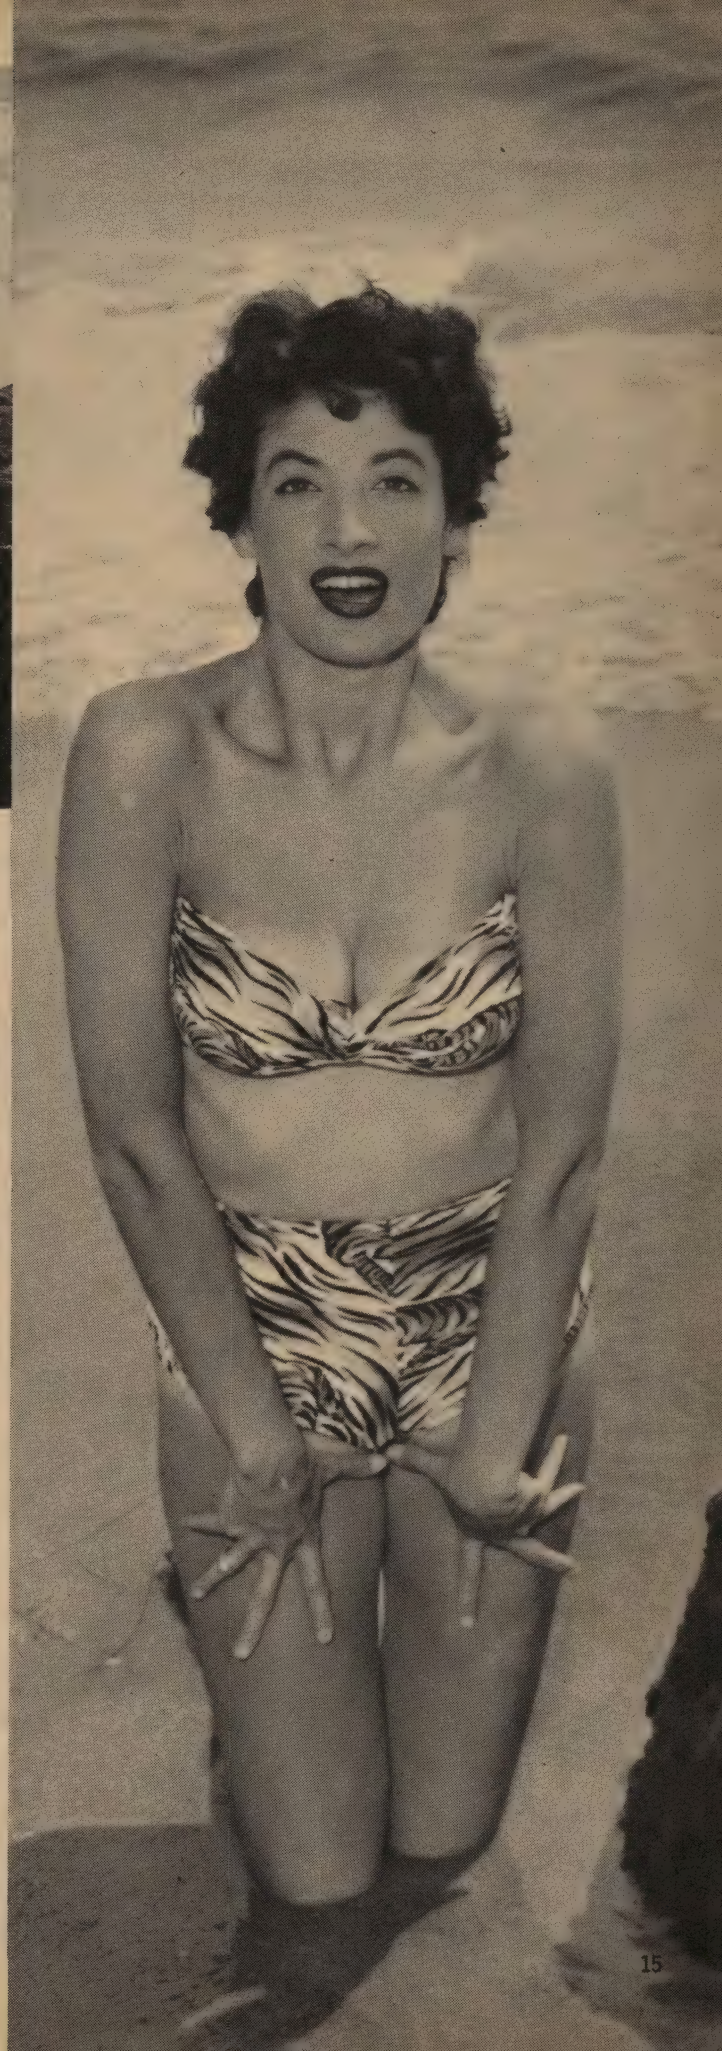
With Baroness von Kories' beautiful 36-24-36 figure she had little trouble in finding work in the post-war cabarets and night clubs which sprang up all over Germany. It was in one of these in West Berlin that she was discovered by an American talent agent on a trip through Europe looking for new personalities to sponsor in the United States. That is how she happened to come to this country but it was on the strength of her talent alone that she became a raging success here.

BARONESS ON A BEACH



Louisa, Baroness von Kories is a true blueblood who has turned to show business in America as a means of recouping her fortunes after the collapse of Germany. The Baroness loves the beach and spends as much time there as she possibly can, even though she is currently appearing in Las Vegas. "I was left penniless after the terrible war in Germany and I had to do something to live. I had studied dancing as a young girl and that was the only thing I knew to do," she told us in our interview.

By J. C. MORLEY

I'D just stepped back on deck with the second treasure chest when I heard Elsa scream. I dropped everything—the chest, my still flaming welding torch—and whirled toward the sound. Then I saw her.

Heavy ropes circled her ankles and wrists and linked her to the anchor shank. The anchor itself dangled crazily over the side of the ship. The winch creaked as Max hoisted the anchor and its dripping burden back on deck.

Elsa sputtered and gasped for breath. The soggy wisps of bikini outlining her firm breasts strained tight as she struggled for air. Max leered down at her, enjoying her struggles.

neither Max or Elsa. He was absorbed in running a gold nail file back and forth against the nail on his left index finger.

Anger exploded in my head. I lunged at Max, catching him off guard. The momentum of my leap knocked us both off our feet. Max grunted as his skull cracked against the metal deck. Heinrich spoke:

"Mr. Morley, you will be kind enough to keep out of something that is not your concern. Max, see that he does."

Max rolled on top of me, pinning me to the deck. Before I could get out from under him he slammed me behind the ear. Hot pain shot down my neck and ricocheted around and around in my skull. I strained against Max's bulk. Again he slammed me. This time I lost the fight against the pain and blacked out.

I came to neatly tied like a package for mailing, bound tightly with no slipping knots. I could roll a little but that was about it.

Elsa no longer screamed. She was past that point. Max had been at work while I was blacked out. Her right inner thigh showed a dull angry burn. I strained at my ropes.

Heinrich spoke in a weary tone. "Once more, Elsa dear. What has happened to the treasure."

Elsa gamely raised her head. She looked steadily at Heinrich. He continued to pick at his nails with the gold file. "I told you. I don't know," she said.

Heinrich sighed. "My dear Elsa. Your childish denials are most annoying. Max, perhaps you can persuade her . . ."

Elsa screamed. I had to get free. Desperately I looked around for something to cut those ropes. My torch. It was right where I had dropped it. And it still flamed. If I could get to it, I could burn the ropes.

Max and Heinrich were concentrating on Elsa. I inched toward the torch. Elsa screamed again. I gritted my teeth, putting that scream out of my mind and inched toward it. The flame inched and spit as I backed my tied wrists into it.

The flame bit through the wrist ropes and I bit my tongue against crying out at the pain but suddenly my hands were free and in a second I had freed my ankles.

"Herr Mueller!" Max had spotted me and was coming at me.

Heinrich Muller held an automatic on me but I grabbed up the flaming torch and shot the flame toward him. He stepped back and said, "Where's the treasure? You and the girl were thick enough. You're in on this too."

I backed toward Elsa. "Maybe I know and maybe I don't. You won't find out while Elsa's tied to the anchor. Release her."

"Get him Max!" Heinrich yelled.

Max started at me and I whirled letting him have the full blast of the torch in the face. He screamed and staggered back against the winch, clutching at the remains of his face. The winch shuddered and groaned. Suddenly it released the anchor, dropping it and Elsa overboard. I dived over the side, carrying the torch with me. I figured I had a minute and a half to get to Elsa. Two at the most. Otherwise she and the treasure would be gone.

We found the gold but death stared us in the face . . .

I'm a welder. Specifically I do underwater welding. I move from yard to yard, mostly doing salvage jobs. My fees are high but I'm good at my work and those high fees are getting me a long way toward my dream of owning my own yard.

So, when Mueller offered me a flat $15,000 plus a piece of the profits for a three week job off the coast of South America, I wasn't exactly reluctant although I did wonder why he was so willing to pay such rates. My experience told me the higher the rate offered the greater the danger.

The danger became apparent as Mueller outlined the job. He was after a sunken U-boat off the coast of one of the leeward islands of South America in a few fathoms of water. It was the ill fated U-169. On a run to South America at the end of World War II the U-boat had carried Nazis and gold. The treasure looted from European capitals. The Nazis were moving the gold to South America for safe keeping until the Third Reich could be re-established. But the U-boat never made it to port. It sank in a storm some five miles off the coast.

All efforts through the years at salvaging the treasure aboard failed because of the location of the

AN EXPLOSIVE COMBINATION OF SEX, SIN AND SIZZLING CELLULOID! THE FIRST FULL REVELATION OF A SECRET RACKET THAT TORTURES FILMLAND'S TOP FAVORITES!

I SMASHED THE NUDE MOVIE BLACKMAIL RING

BY PERRY REVEL

Editor's Note: Perry Revell is a free-lance private detective who works out of Los Angeles and often conducts secret investigations both for the major film studios and for individual stars. The following article is his own uncensored account of how he broke up one of Hollywood's most vicious underworld rackets.

BIG BILL HENSHAW glanced over at me, his heavy features contorting into what was meant to be a knowing smile. "Roll 'em," he said.

I started the cameras. They were old equipment which Henshaw had picked up third hand, someplace. But everything was in good condition and at least I didn't have to worry about any of the stuff breaking down.

I watched through my viewfinder as Betty Claviere entered the bedroom set. She was a tall blonde girl who moved with the quick and easy grace of a prowling cat. She yawned (Continued on next page) to the camera and pretended to get ready for bed, kicking away her shoes, pulling off her blouse and reaching behind her to undo the straps of her brassiere.

"Damn it, strip!" he shouted at the frightened girl.

After the bra was off, she stood up and stretched with her arms pulled back over her head in order to exhibit her full and beautifully made breasts. Then she turned as Frank Greyson, who was playing the part of her lover, walked onto the set dressed in a pair of pajamas.

I took a quick shot of him leering avidly, then panned back to the girl who was now slithering out of her half-slip and panties. She stood up once more so that the camera could get a perfect view of her lithe young body. I got it all in focus: Her breasts, her flat stomach, her exquisitely shaped legs and thighs.

While I kept the equipment grinding, the man suddenly tore off his own things and grabbed hold of her. They sunk down on the bed, locked in a tight embrace. . . .

Then, without any warning at all, the girl screamed and broke free. "I can't go through with it," she cried, breaking into sobs that wracked her lovely figure. "I just can't!"

Big Bill Henshaw's face flushed red with fury. "Cut!" he shouted at me. "Cut!"

The whirring of the cameras stopped and the lights were turned off.

HENSHAW STRODE OVER to the girl and grabbed her by her long, blonde hair. He held her so that her face was only a few inches away from his own. "What do you think you're doing?" he yelled.

"I . . . I'm sorry, Mr. Henshaw," the girl said, quivering with fear. "I just thought I was going to have to undress. I didn't know I was going to have to. . . ." Her voice trailed away and she began to sob once more.

"What the hell are you complaining about?" Henshaw demanded. "You wanted to break into movies, didn't you? You said you were willing to make anything — even a nudie. Well, this picture goes one step farther than most—that's all!"

The blonde was still sobbing. She repeated once more that she couldn't go through with it.

Henshaw yanked her head back, cruelly, and slapped her full across the mouth: First one side, then the other.

The girl gasped in pain. Her sobs stopped and her eyes widened in stark terror.

Henshaw's laugh was harsh and ugly. "You can't, huh?" he asked. "All right, then, I'll give you a choice. You play the scene, now, and nothing more will be said. If you don't play it, I'll carve that pretty face of yours so that the only picture you'll ever be in is a horror film!"

He meant it and the girl knew that he meant it. She pulled herself together with an effort as he released his hold on her hair. "All right, Mr. Henshaw, I'll try."

"Good." Henshaw grinned happily. "Now, go wash yourself off and put on some more make-up. We want everyone to think that you're happy."

She went into the dressing-room while the rest of us waited.

I was filled with self-disgust. I wanted to put my knee in the small of Henshaw's back and apply pressure until his spinal column broke. I could have done it, too! But I had to stop myself . . . hold myself in.

"I got it all in focus: Her breasts, her flat stomach, her exquisitely shaped legs and thighs."

I WAS A PRIVATE INVESTIGATOR on an important assignment. If Betty Claviere was made to go through with her job, her life would not be over. She was young; she would recouperate. But if I played my hand too soon, there are many people I could name whose lives would have been as good as over. Betty would just have to take what was coming.

A tough decision? Yes. But mine is a tough business. And perhaps the toughest decision of all was taking on this assignment in the first place.

It started with a phone call I received from the head of one of the biggest studios in California. "Come on over to my office," he said. "We'll have lunch and I'll toss a nasty little problem in your lap."

In my town, at least, if the head of a studio summons you, you come running. That is, if a good part of your income comes from the film industry. And mine does.

So I cancelled the lunch date I already had, straightened my tie and drove over to the lot where the big boss had left word for me to be shown right in.

The problem was nasty, all right. And it wasn't such a little one. No less than eight of his top female stars were being blackmailed because of nude and stag movies they had made.

The scheme was run by a highly polished, well organized gang. They had pictures of these women in poses that would have shocked a G.I. making the most of a Paris leave. And unless the girls paid off regularly, they threatened to send them to gossip columnists and exposé magazines. Once the P.T.A.s and civic improvement groups got a whiff of these photos, their careers would be worth a great big zero.

"How big are these stars?" I asked.

He named some names.

I whistled. They were some of the very biggest. If I repeated them, here, you would know them in an instant. But I will not do that—nor will I reveal the name of the studio they work for. My job is protecting people; not ruining

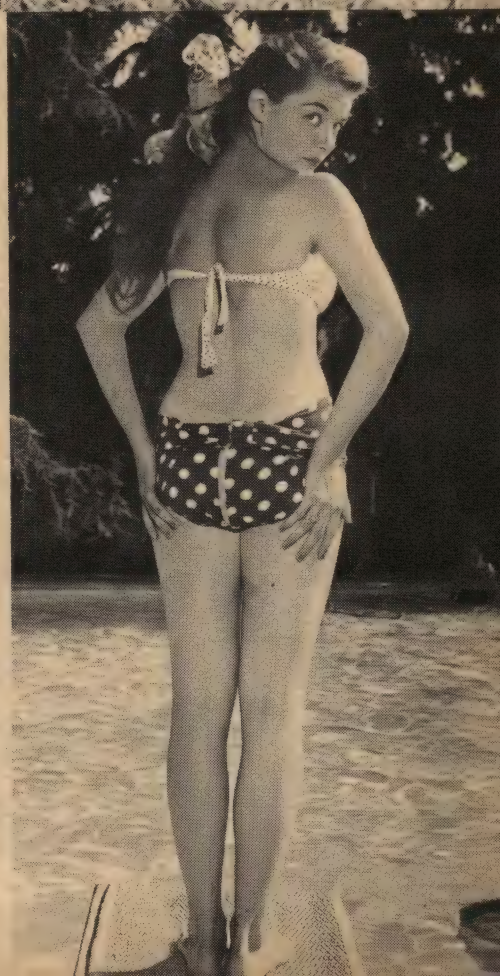
THE RACEHORSE AND THE LADY

Miss Sheree Bessire is a most unusual young lady in many extraordinary ways. First of all she is a shockingly good looking young woman which is pretty obvious to anyone who can see at all. Second she is the owner of a race horse named Honest John. Even though she does take some time for her professional life, which is modeling and dancing, she would rather spend all her time with her beloved pet racehorse. We think there never was a horse quite so lucky.

Although our beautiful Sheree is mad about her racehorse she does find time to pose for modeling jobs and to dance in various night clubs about the country as a career.

"I am crazy about racing and even though my horse Honest John has never won a race, I still hope each time that he will. I guess it's a kind of gambling spirit or something that gets into your blood. I know now why racing horses is called the sport of kings. Even royalty and people of power can find no sport which is more exciting. And the horses are so beautiful, I simply love them. When they run it is like dancing," says Sheree with a vast enthusiasm and charm.



Abandoned by their guides in a steaming green hell, a beautiful blonde to watch over and certain death in the sacrificial pits was the only possible result of his desperate attempt to save his girl's brother . . .

BLOOD ORGY of the TIGER-MEN PRIESTS!!

By KARL THOMAS

LISA twisted frantically trying to free her wrists but the bonds held tight. The only result of her effort was that the ropes cut deeper into her bleeding wrists.

Her frenzied body movements spun her in a tantalizing motion and the gyrations inflamed the lust of the two natives below her in the pit. They stretched even higher, extending their arms and clawing at her dangling legs.

I was helpless to aid her. My helplessness was even more maddening and humiliating to me because the natives hadn't even bothered to tie me. They needed me unfettered to keep their fire going under the evil smelling ceremonial brew pot. To make sure that I stayed put tending the fire they stationed two giant natives with deadly poison-tipped spears to guard me. One move and I'd be no use to Lisa or anyone else. I'd be very dead and in agony while I died but I had to figure some way to get past those guards and save Lisa.

The guards and dancers around Lisa increased their frantic howlings. Clearly they were close to dropping Lisa into the pit for the ceremonial rape by the two sacred tiger-men.

Once again the native who guided the rope suspending Lisa over the pit slowly pulled her up and away from the reaching claws of the evil priests in the pit. The watching crowd wailed in disappointment. Their mood indicated that they were anxious for the rape. Their eyes were glittering in anticipation.

First the elder of the two tiger-men in the pit would sate his senses on Lisa; next his companion would have his fill while the crowd above howled and drank the ceremonial brew. Then the young men who'd never been with a woman would jump into the pit for their manhood initiation. (Continued on page 58)

THE LAW CONCERNING TREASURE HUNTING

United States law regarding Treasure: "Coin, gold, silver plate or similar articles hidden for safe keeping and forgotten or remaining undiscovered, by reason of death of the person who hid them, are technically known as Treasure Trove. . . . Treasure Trove is where any money is found in the earth, but not lying upon it, and no man knows to whom it belongs."

In present day terms this includes paper money!

"A finder of treasure trove is entitled thereto, as against the owner of the land where the treasure was found, and all the world except the true owner, in the absence of statute, but the owner of the land is entitled to property other than treasure trove, embedded in its soil. The owner of the soil in which treasure trove is found acquires no title thereto, by virtue of his ownership of the land."

To dig for treasure get the landowner's permission—otherwise you are guilty of trespass! —in a written agreement that includes:

1. Names of parties searching.
2. Reason for searching.
3. Agreement on division of treasure.

If land is State owned permission must be obtained from the State. Most states do not demand any percentage of the find.

YOU don't have to go to the Caribbean or the Florida keys if you want to find sunken gold. Not all the treasure lies at the bottom of the Spanish Main. A great deal of it is not underneath the sea at all. If you live in the Chicago-Detroit area, or anywhere near it, millions of dollars are available to you for the taking—they lie at the bottom of the Great Lakes, for the most part in less than 200 feet of water. And to recover it you will not need elaborate or expensive equipment nor a boat over 16 feet long.

In the year 1871 alone almost 1,200 ships were lost on the Great Lakes. It is true that the cargoes they carried were sometimes timber or coal, but in almost every case there was gold on board, the payroll with which the crew would be paid. Between the years 1878 and 1898 almost 6,000 ships were reported wrecked or lost on the Great Lakes and more than a 1,000 of them were total losses—ship, cargo, crew, and passengers. And these losses took place during the regular navigation season on the Lakes which is from about the middle of April until December usually.

The first ship that was known to be lost on the Great Lakes was the Griffin in 1679. She had been built for the fur trade in the Upper Lakes, and on August 7, 1679, she sailed from LaSalle, New York, with 34 men on board and $12,000 in gold. They sailed up Lake Huron to St. Ignance, then through the Straits of Mackinaw to Green Bay, Wisconsin. On September 18, 1679 the Griffin started back through the Straits on her homeward voyage. That night a gale swept the Straits and she foundered and went down with all hands—and the $12,000 in gold which has never been recovered.

The most famous of the Great Lakes wrecks is the Pewabic, a steamer that was lost in a collision with another vessel off Thunder Bay Island in Lake Huron. This happened on August 9, 1865, and she now lies in 200 feet of water. There were about 180 passengers on board and she was carrying a general cargo, but it included 350 tons of copper and $50,000 in gold in the

THE MANY SIDES OF MARIE STINGER

For a taste of honey without getting stung, we suggest Marie Stinger—a girl who likes things sweet. Sweet music, sweet talk, sweet desserts. Worried about that voluptuous body? Not Marie. An hour or so of her own sensational brand of Twisting keeps her in beautiful shape.

Marie is a girl of many talents. New friends are always surprised when they learn that she is as adept in an apron as she is in a bikini—and very few gals can top Marie when it comes to baking a chocolate layer-cake.

Indoors or out, Marie's fun to be with—and when you're with her, you're in for a good time—if you can keep up with her.

Marie is always on the go, go, go. A real livewire, who likes swimming, tennis, dancing, and, of course, men. Especially men who like chocolate layer cake.

A popular girl, with many friends and admirers, she attributes it all to her outgoing personality. She hopes to be a great success in pictures, and from here it looks like she's a cinch. But Marie isn't actually losing any sleep over it. She shrugs her shoulders and leaves things up to fate. Che sera, sara, as the Italians say.

Living life to the hilt is Marie's goal. She has fun whatever she does. No prude, she enjoys a few sociable drinks with an interesting companion. Her preference in beverages? Stingers, naturally!

TAKE DOCTOR'S LOVE TEST!!!

Find out if you're really the Don Juan you think you are.

By DR. ORVILLE STRATTON

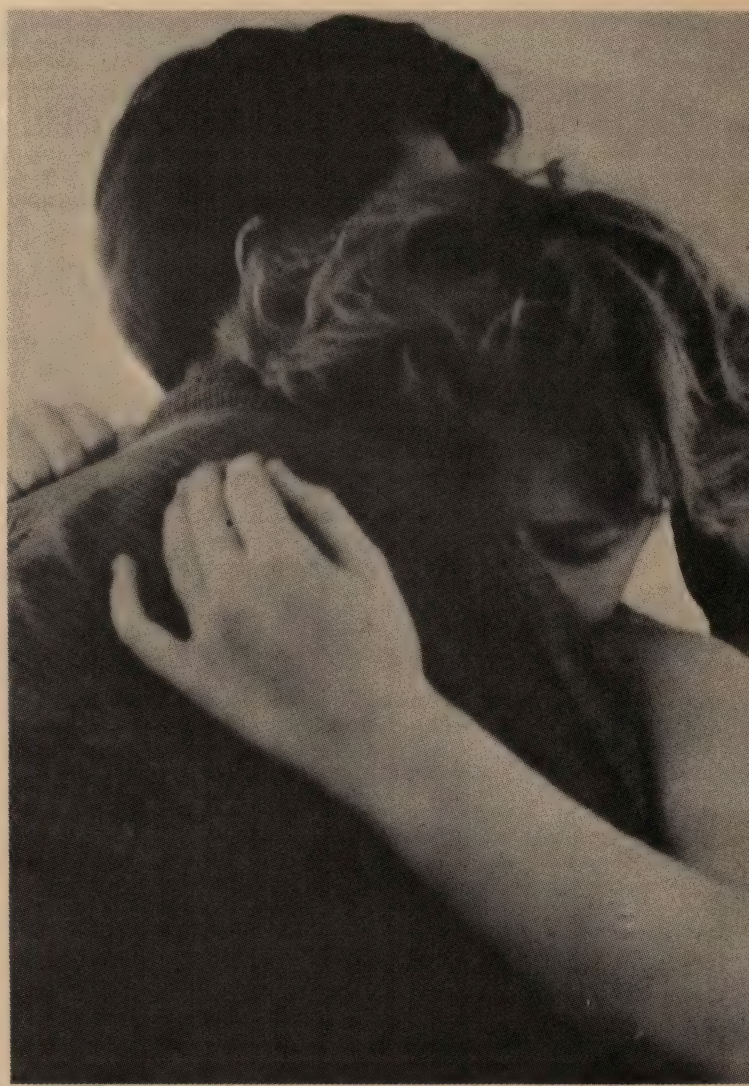
NOT SO LONG AGO, a young man came to my office. He was tall, handsome and had the muscular build of an athlete—in short, he looked like a movie star, the sort of man most healthy girls would love to get their hands on. But the story he told me proved just the opposite.

True enough, he had no trouble meeting girls, dating them, and usually, to put it bluntly, persuading them to engage in love affairs. Nor was he physically incapable of giving a woman the pleasure and satisfaction she requires in her relations with a lover. His troubles invariably started a few days after they had become intimate with him. Every one of the girls he had known became quarrelsome after a few days, started bickering, began flirting with other, often older men, and soon left him. He didn't know what to do. "I don't understand it, doctor," he said, "there isn't anything these guys could do that I couldn't do as well or better. And older men! I just don't get it."

The young man's dilemma was far from unusual. Most men, particularly young men, are convinced they are nature's gift to women, but statistics prove otherwise. Six out of ten married women are dissatisfied with their husbands as lovers. Eight out of ten unmarried girls who have had affairs report that the arrangement was highly ungratifying. Half of them say that they got no satisfaction whatsoever out of their sexual liaisons and complain that the men just didn't understand them and their needs, not as individuals so much, but as females of the human species.

Although readers of this magazine probably know more about women than the average American male, these statistics would indicate that, even so, more than half of them—perhaps you yourself—don't know as much about women as they should and are not the expert lovers that they think they are.

So, before reading any farther, why don't you take the love test. Answer the questions honestly and then



Does she cling to you, tell you that you're the only man in the world for her? If she doesn't, do you know why?

Do you treat your woman as if she's the only one in the world? Are you sure enough of yourself not to get jealous if your gal goes out with another man? If the answers are yes, you are a lover.

The girl in your arms may be willing, but are you able?

count up your score. Later we'll see where you might have gone wrong.

5) Do you compliment her on her clothes, notice her new hairdo?
6) Do you make sure that you are always clean, neat and well-groomed in her company?
7) Are you always well-shaven when you kiss her?
8) Are you completely free and uninhibited when you make love (or are you ashamed of your body)?
9) Do you recognize and respect the fact that most women need more time and emotional and physical preparation to become passionate than the average man? Do you give her that time (or are you greedily impatient in your love play)?
10) When she is still aroused, but you are tired, do you make an effort to comply with her desires?
11) Are you willing to go along when she feels like engaging in love experimentation?
12) Do you tell her your deep, inner-most secrets?
13) Do you respect her wishes when she does not want to—or is unable—to make love?

OPERATION STRIPTEASE!

By WALT PIERCE

The thick high walls of Rouen prison were only yards away at the end of the narrow street as La Pistole and I waited for the British bombers to come. From the window of the house where we were hiding I could see the German guards in their little block houses atop the wall, their machine guns pointing into the prison yard. La Pistole touched my arm.

"The British must not fail us this time," she said, her beautiful blue eyes wet with tears. I took her in my arms and kissed her.

"The bombers will come," I said and just then we heard them, their engines a distant thunder and the air raid sirens started screaming. La Pistole shuddered and I could smell the sweet clean odor of her hair against my face as she clung to me. "We'll get Pepe out in time," I said but I knew the Germans might kill him and the other political prisoners condemned to death when they realized the bombers were trying to breach the prison walls and that the raid on the town was a cover for that. We had the worst of the operation ahead of us. I held her close as the bombs began to fall.

We could hear them exploding in the town now. The explosions seeming to walk toward us as the sticks struck. The town was taking a hard beating and suddenly a light bomber came in over the houses headed down the street for the prison wall. I saw the Germans in the guard houses atop the wall trying to get away. They were too late. The wall blew apart and the Germans with it. There was suddenly a great gaping hole where the wall had been. The blast knocked us down and tore big chunks of plaster from the walls of the old house where we were hiding.

Another bomber zeroed in on the prison and blew the administration building apart. The house we were in rocked and suddenly I smelled smoke. Just then another bomber hit the corner of the main prison building and ripped out the whole wall exposing the cells. I got up from the floor where we lay. We had to get moving. It was now or never if we were going to free Pepe. I grabbed La Pistole's arm and started to leave the house when a bomb hit in the back of the house and suddenly the air was filled with flying plaster and timbers were falling on us. I cursed the fools for (Continued on next page) not being more careful with their bombs and even above the noise I heard La Pistole scream and felt a blow on the back that knocked me flat. When I came to my senses I smelled smoke even stronger and I knew the house was on fire. We had to get out of there and I shoved boards off me and stood up looking for La Pistole. She lay nearby but her legs were caught beneath a jumble of boards and timbers and her eyes were closed.

Frantically I tried to drag her out but I was afraid to pull too hard on her when she was unconscious. In a moment her eyes opened and I said, "Are you hurt?"

She looked at me in despair. "No, I'm not hurt but I can't crawl out. My foot is caught." From the look in her eyes I knew she was smelling the smoke, too. It was thick around us mixed with plaster dust and somewhere I could hear the crackle of flames. I started tearing boards away but the pile of debris was very shaky and I was afraid it would come down on both of us.

"Charles, wait!" La Pistole screamed at me and I looked at her. She was holding her gun on me.

"Get out," she said. Go get Pepe! He's more important than I am." I looked at her in horror as she held that forty-five on me. She meant it. I could see it in the way she held so steady and cold. What she said was true. Pepe was the leader of the whole resistance movement and he was much more important than any of us but I couldn't leave her to die so horribly, yet she was forcing me to.

I, Charles Lemaitre, would never have been in love with Yvette Boileau, for that was La Pistole's true name, if I had not been born in France of an American father and a French mother. My father had stayed in France after the first war as the overseas representative of an American machinery manufacturer for whom he'd worked before his service began. I was born and educated in France and felt more French than American in most ways. Pepe Boileau was my best friend in school. Pepe was a good student but he was a wild, daring and tough kid who knew how to use his fists. I knew he had a younger sister but I never saw her until years later when France had fallen and Pepe and I were working together in the underground.

Pepe and I had gone to Rouen to sabotage a German SS troop train. We knew it was to stop in Rouen to pick up a German SS General and his staff for our informant had said the general had commanded the performance at the Follies to start an hour before its regular time to give him a chance to attend. Pepe was an expert at train wrecking and I was sent to Rouen to help him. I met him at an old house near Rouen Prison which he said belonged to his grandmother who was living with relatives in the country.

That night Pepe insisted that we go to the Follies to see a dancer called simply, La Danseuse Sensuel that the Germans were paying high prices to see. I didn't like it for I thought Pepe was taking unnecessary risks but he was the leader and I had to follow. I think it amused Pepe to sit in the audience with the Germans knowing he was their deadly enemy and that he was going to kill some of these men that very night. I think he enjoyed the danger. I wasn't such a dare-devil; I was more cautious. But when this dancer came on stage and began her act I forgot everything else.

La Pistole danced for the SS General to send him to his death . . .

She was a beautiful woman with black hair and a perfect body. She was what is called in America a stripper, I believe but she was a true artist and her audience was cheering by the time she had removed the last bit of her costume and danced off the stage. I was limp from the experience. She was fantastic! What beautiful legs! What magnificent breasts! I had never seen a woman like her and I was cheering, too but Pepe sat watching the Germans with a glitter in his eyes and a small smile on his lips.

When we got back to the house of Pepe's grandmother near Rouen Prison where we were to meet another resistance member, the dancer was there. Pepe smiled at my surprise and introduced me.

"This is La Pistole," he said. "She will be the other member of our team tonight."

I don't know what I said, something foolish, I'm sure since La Pistole's fame had spread throughout the resistance movement and I was doubly impressed with her looks. They both laughed but we lost no time in getting our guns and heading for the long bridge that lay some ten miles away. La Pistole carried only her forty-five automatic which had been given her by a downed flier she'd saved and which had become legend in her hands. She was a dead shot with it. I had a submachine gun and Pepe carried some tools in a kit plus a couple of small packs of plastic explosives.

The bridge was really a long trestle with double tracks but the water was wide and deep. We knew it would be well guarded but Pepe was confident we could slip past the guards.

The train was due to leave Rouen at 1:00 a.m. and it was nearly 12:30 when we hid our bicycles in some brush beside the river. Very quietly we made our way through the brush to the tracks but even in the deep blackness of the night we could make out the shape of the trestle against the sky. Pepe was jubilant when he found a freight standing waiting for the SS General's troop train to pass. It was loaded with Tiger tanks on flat cars and stood on one of the tracks of the trestle.

"I hope it has munitions in the box cars," Pepe whispered. Just then a German sentry lighted a cigarette in the darkness not ten feet away. We faded silently back into the brush and moved further up the tracks toward Rouen. Our time was getting short and we were blocked from the trestle on that side. We would have to cross the tracks but when we tried it, the way was blocked by guards and we moved on back along the tracks further toward Rouen. The whole thing could go wrong in seconds and I was very nervous. Pepe was cutting it pretty close. Time was running out. I wanted to mine the tracks and get out of there but La Pistole and Pepe were deaf to my advice.

As we moved up the tracks we saw the switch that controlled the siding on which the freight sat. There was a sentry beside it but that was not going to stop Pepe. We hid in the deep shadows beside the tracks waiting to see if he would move away but he didn't. It was two minutes past one o'clock and the train was due soon. It would make the ten miles from Rouen in less than fifteen minutes and was on its way now.

Pepe motioned to me and we crept up on the sentry. I got my wire garotte out and as Pepe drew his attention I whipped it around the sentry's neck. He never made a sound and he was dead in less than a minute. La Pistole and I carried him into the deep shadows of the ditch beside the tracks while Pepe changed the switch. He had hardly joined us in the ditch when the troop train came in sight. It was traveling about sixty miles per hour when it passed us and we glimpsed the General's private car just back of the engine. They were having a party and ignoring blackout regulations.

Suddenly there was a scream of brakes but it was much too late for that and and the troop train piled into the freight and they both went through the trestle in one great grinding screech of ripping metal. Then there was a hellish explosion as munitions on the freight blew. The night was suddenly light as day with exploding shells and soldiers were running up the tracks toward the wreckage. A few cars remained out of the water but they lay on their sides and there were screams of terror and pain from them. Pepe motioned us to follow him and we dived into the brush heading for our bicycles beside the road.

We got to the bicycles and were pedaling furiously toward Rouen only to run into a three truck convoy of soldiers. We scattered, La Pistole and I dumping our bikes and hiding behind a farmer's stone wall but Pepe was not so lucky. They saw him and picked him up and there was nothing we could do about it.

When we got back to the house in Rouen we made our contacts and let the resistance know Pepe was taken. Until we could find what they were going to do with him or where he was we could only wait. It was then in that old house near Rouen Prison that I found La Pistole was really Yvette Boileau, Pepe's sister.

At first I thought she was in love with Pepe from the way she acted. She wept and wrung her hands but when I tried to comfort her she came into my arms and suddenly I found myself kissing her and she returned my kisses with fervour. Before either of us were aware of what was happening we were in bed and making love. I think it was the fear and the danger that made it possible for us so quickly to fall in love but no matter. She was a magnificent woman and that night will stay in my memory forever. So will the next three days while we waited to hear what Pepe's fate would be. The waiting was filled with tension which only love making seemed able to relieve. Then we got word that Pepe was in Rouen Prison and being tortured to make him tell who his other conspirators were.

"We've got to get him out," Yvette said. "No man can stand the tortures of the Gestapo. Even Pepe will break."

I believed her. I had seen men broken and mere shells of themselves after the Gestapo had finished with them but getting Pepe out was hopeless. The prison was a real fortress with walls thirty feet high and five feet thick. It was then when we got the idea of getting the British to stage a raid on the prison to breach the walls for us.

They were most reluctant at first but La Pistole was a woman to be reckoned with. She was the radio operator for the area and every time she sent a message she slipped in a bit of information about Pepe and when we heard there were three British Intelligence Officers in the prison with him, she began working on London in earnest. We were amazed that Pepe had not broken for our informants inside the walls told of his daily beatings and tortures. Yet he had not told them anything. Finally in desperation they set a date for his execution and when we heard that, La Pistole told London that their men and Pepe were to be shot on the twentieth. It was then that London promised the raid nails each of them sprouted from their fingers backed up my belief that what was about to happen wasn't going to be pleasant.

I turned to Jagger again and tried to catch him off guard. I let fly with a fast right that I hoped would land home. He saw my fist coming and ducked out of the doorway, just before my knuckles slammed hard into the woodwork. Before I could clench my bleeding hand for another try at him he pulled a gun on me. For a moment I thought I could still rush him but before I even had a chance to try I felt a sharp stabbing pain dig into my back. I wheeled my head around and found myself surrounded by the half-nude girls Jagger had sicked on me. They let out another squeal and started ripping my clothes off.

I kicked out at the first one who was working down on her knees ripping the legs of my pants and trying to shred them off piece by piece. In this situation there was no time to worry about kicking women. In their state these chicks weren't even human. They were blood-hungry, sex-doped tigresses and I was their prey. I caught the first girl with my knee and sent her spinning backwards on the floor. She looked dazed for a second then let out a fierce cry and lunged in for another attack. This time she aimed higher, catching me right in the groin and tearing my clothes open. I was about to give out with another knee in her face when I felt cold steel shoved in my rib cage.

"That's enough of that stuff," Jagger growled shoving the gun barrel deep into my flesh. "Just cool it, buster, and you won't get hurt. Neither will the girl if you're both innocent."

The mention of Polly brought me back to my senses. I gave a fast turn of my head and could see that across the room Polly was going through the same thing. Dickey, a real tough chick, had her down on the bed and was ripping off her blouse. Polly struggled and freed herself for a moment—just time enough to look up at me with a screaming cry for help in her eyes. Her lips were sealed, though. She knew that if she cried out my name we were both dead.

"You two," Jagger yelled at two of the three girls working me over. "Forget him and help Dickey with the girl." They looked disappointed that they had to abandon a prize catch but in a flash they were leaping across the floor and attacking Polly. I heard her scream and I tried to break loose but Jagger smashed me across the face with his gun hand, opening a gash on my lip with the rough steel. All I could do was stand there and listen to Polly's helpless screams.

Three weeks ago if somebody'd told me that I'd be in this spot I'd have told them they were nuts. As trouble-shooting reporters for a big metropolitan newspaper, Polly and I had been sent to this small Florida town to uncover a kidnapping plot that had hit a local college. During the past two weeks, the school had "lost" a good dozen or more bright guys, straight "A" students in science, law, medicine, and engineering. For some unexplained reason they had suddenly dropped off the face of the earth. We were sent down to find out why.

The first week we were there I cruised around town and got to know where the college crowd hung out. One evening I walked into a bar called the Blue Pussy Cat, looking for someone who might know what happened to the missing students. From the outside, the place really seemed to be jumping; inside it was ready to explode. Broads in tight short-shorts that crawled up their thighs were bumping and grinding on the dance floor with guys who had nothing better to do than watch the way those pants clung.

I worked my way to the bar and hardly got my drink before a cool arm slid around my neck and a pair of ripe young breasts pressed into my side. I turned and found myself staring into the eyes of a knock-out blonde with a build that should have been illegal in a college town.

We talked for a while and she slithered in closer to the bar, beginning to work her hand slowly up and down my legs. I slipped my arm around her and drew my fingers in close to her breasts. She jumped a little at the pressure I applied but turned a quick smile that told me anything I'd do to her that night would be okay with her.

"It's hot in here," I whispered to her brushing against that cool blonde hair. "Let's go to my hotel. It's air-conditioned." I knew damn well that with the heat that babe was generating the air-conditioning would be working overtime tonight.

We walked outside and down the street to my hotel. We'd just come into the lobby when the desk clerk called to me. "Mr. Prince," he said, "phone call for you, sir." I knew the only person who'd be calling me as Rick Prince would be Polly. Damn. She didn't have to pick the one night I wanted to forget about the assignment to contact me. I told the blonde to wait and went to the phone booth the clerk indicated. Polly was breathless.

She had to talk fast, she said, because she'd slipped out for only a few minutes. She'd managed to work her way into a gang that was operating a girlie house for the college boys, she said. Polly didn't know all the answers yet; they didn't trust her that much so soon. What she did know was incriminating, though. She said the leader was a young punk named Jagger who picked out special guys and sent them off to a room with a girl named Dickey. Polly said the other girls just showed their guys a good time and that was that. The guys who went with Dickey, though, didn't come back with her. Polly was sure that this had something to do with the missing students. She gave me the address and told me to come right over.

I went outside the phone booth wondering what to tell the blonde, but the lobby was empty. I cursed myself and promised that I'd find her again the next night. Then I started for the address Polly'd given me.

I went into the basement where Polly said they were operating later and knocked three times. The door opened slowly and Jagger stuck his head out. "What do you want?" he said.

I told him I was from the college and was looking for some fun as a study break. I added that I was studying medicine because I knew some of the missing guys had been.

He smiled and said he had just the nurse to give me a physical. That was Dickey, who walked out wearing only her see-through black lace panties and a tiny bra that didn't begin to hold everything it was supposed to. She smiled at me and we were about to go into another room when the door opened again and a half dozen other girls walked in, including Polly. She was the only one wearing anything more than pants and a bra. Jagger seemed annoyed to see them and was just about to send them out when a voice came screaming out at him. "Hey, Jagger, what's going on?" I felt my heart sink when I suddenly realized who that voice belonged to. "That one's mine," I heard. "I was with him earlier tonight but we didn't have a chance to finish what we started at his hotel." I turned quickly and looked into the eyes of the blonde I'd left at the hotel phone booth. Then I looked at Jagger. He wasn't smiling any more.

"I thought you said you lived at the school, Doc," Jagger said. I knew from the look on his face that I had to think fast and from the pale look on Polly's face I knew she was worried too.

"I do," I said quickly. "I was just taking her there for the night. I never was at that hotel before tonight."

"That's a lie," the blonde yelled. "The desk clerk knew you. He gave you that phone call and said it was for Mr. Prince." I wanted to slap her pretty painted mouth shut. She was going to get me laid, all right. Out cold, if she didn't stop talking.

"What time was that phone call?" Jagger asked, going to the girl and getting a hard grip on her arm. She twisted in pain as she tried to remember.

"A half-hour ago, Jagger," she moaned. "Just before I came back here. Stop please, you're hurting me." Jagger gave her a shove that sent her flying back against the cot.

"A half-hour, huh?" he said, almost to himself. Then he looked at Polly. "That's about the time you went out, wasn't it? For some aspirin you said." He walked closer to Polly and grabbed her roughly by the shoulder. "Was your headache so bad you had to call Doc here?"

Polly looked at him with fear in her eyes although she stood right up to him. "What's going on?" I said. "I came up here to have some fun not to play twenty questions."

Jagger turned to me but held his grip on Polly. "You want some fun, Doc? All right, we'll give you some fun. I don't know if you're telling the truth or not. If so, you won't mind if I switch girls on you, will you?" He gave a quick jerk of his arm and shoved Polly in front of himself. "Here's the chick to play nurse with you, Doc. First time out for her, too. She always had a headache with the others, so she couldn't play. Let's see if you can cure that headache, Doc." He shoved Polly hard onto the cot and then came over to me. "Get going, Doc, let's see some of your bedside manner."

"Not here in front of you all," I said. "Let us go into the other room. I don't care which girl it is." Jagger shook his head. "All right, then forget it," I said. I thought that if I could get out of this place and call the cops first that I could get back for Polly. Jagger would have none of it though.

"All right, Doc," he said. "Looks like you need some help before this operation. "Strip him!" he barked.

Now, I stood in my underclothes watching Dickey force Polly onto the bed. Jagger shoved me in her direction with his gun. "Get going, Doc," he ordered. "And it better be good."

I started slowly across the room. I knew that I had to find a way of getting that gun from him before it was too late. I had no idea what he had in mind for me or what he planned to do with us afterwards. He prodded me to the bed then backed off a little. "All right, Doc, go to it," he laughed.

I stood over Polly's nearly naked body and saw the tears running down her face. She was humiliated but she'd go through with it to the end if necessary.

I sat down on the bed and was just about to reach for her when a bottle on the table next to us caught my eye. "Wait a minute," I said quickly. This girl's having a convulsion!" I hoped the lie would work just long enough to draw Jagger close to me and his attention from me to Polly. She thought fast and began to roll her eyes and drool at the mouth. Her act convinced Jagger. He bent over to lift her head and in that moment I grabbed the bottle and smashed it against the table.

Jagger looked up instantly and went for his gun but I was too quick for him. I struck out at his hand with the splintered bottle and cut deep into his flesh. He screamed in pain and dropped the gun as if it were hot. He shook his bleeding fist and I swung out at him catching him with a hard blow on the jaw. Instead of making him weaker that seemed to arouse him

"I'd be fed up with him if I wasn't so well fed by him."

☐ Sex Feeling in Men & Women

Dr. Kelly's sex manual is valuable for three reasons: (1) it covers the entire subject of sex in marriage — male and female reproductive organs; sex impulse in men v. women; masturbation in and out of marriage; precoital stimulation; problems of sexually frustrated wives (with case-histories); sex myths; aids to penetration; oral eroticism;

(2) It abounds in important facts generally available only in higher priced books — enlarging the penis to a maximum; the wife's assistance in overcoming semi-impotence; erotic fears of wives; eliminating problems caused by over-sized and under-sized husbands; prolonging coitus; etc.

(3) Its original drawings. These include the male and female sex organs, both internal and external and specially-drawn illustrations, available in no other manual, depicting the correct and incorrect methods of penetration (with and without penile-clitoral contact). $3.00.

to new life. Using his bleeding hand and his good one he began throwing punches at me from everywhere. I caught one blow right in the gut that knocked the wind out of me. He was about to slam down on me with another when I butted him in the face. I caught him a little off balance and sent him sprawling to the floor blood gushing from a broken nose.

Before he could get up Dickey rushed at me, hate in her eyes and out for blood. The other girls stood back next to the wall afraid to get into this. I saw Jagger shake himself and get up and I knew I couldn't fight him and Dickey at the same time. Polly took care of that though. She made one leap landing on Dickey's back and they went down in a snarling clawing tangle.

I made a dive for the gun Jagger had dropped and beat him to it just in time but he got a death grip on my wrist and we were struggling and kicking, kneeing each other. All the time I could hear Dickey and Polly screaming and tearing at each other but there was nothing I could do about it. I just hoped Polly could hold her own against that big broad until I could get the gun free. With one big heave I shoved Jagger from me and his grip broke as we slammed against the wall. I whipped the pistol against his head and he went down in a heap, out cold. I turned quickly to help Polly but she didn't need it. She'd managed to flatten that tough brunette all by herself.

"Can this really be happening

After Polly helped me tie up Jagger and Dickey and we got dressed, she went to call the cops. Within a matter of minutes the whole crew was hustled off to the station. It took a lot of hard work but they made Jagger talk about what was going on. It seems that he and Dickey were working for those tropic islands that had recently gone Commie. Without American aid, the country was falling apart and Jagger had made a deal to supply them with doctors, technicians and engineers from the U.S. It was his version of white slavery. Once the college boys got there they would have a choice of either helping the government or being tortured. It was a foolproof plan and in another week it would have worked perfectly. Jagger had promised a first shipment of two dozen men and he almost had that many when I stepped into the picture. He told the cops where to find the boys and we found them doped and nearly starved but still alive.

Polly and I phoned our editor the story and we expected to see screaming headlines the next day. We were wrong. The government asked the paper to suppress the story. hey felt that if the truth were known it would only lead to a worse international situation than already existed. Since the kidnapping gang had been broken up there was no chance of it happening again and our paper cooperated. Our paper paid us well and Polly and I got our bonus for the best story we ever uncovered. ●●

DIVE DEEP AND DIE

U-boat. The problem was not a technical one of impossible depth because the boat was only a few fathoms down. The problem was natives, first and getting into the sub, second.

The position of the sunken U-boat was close to certain underwater caves considered sacred by the island's natives. They believed the spirit of their god-of-life lived in the caves and to protect him from disturbance they patrolled the waters around the caves. They also killed any intruders whom they considered to be threats to the god's well being.

Mueller's plans for getting past these natives and to the gold was simple and ingenious. That's when I learned about Elsa and the part she would play in the plan.

She stacked up at about five feet four of lush female curves with skin which made that old saw about peaches and cream believable. It was hard to keep my hands off all that ripeness rippling so seductively as she moved toward me across the deck.

"Elsa is vital to our plans," Mueller had said busily cleaning his nails with that outrageous gold file, so he didn't see Elsa and me as we eyed one another; each sizing up the other's bedroom potentials. I was delighted that this voluptuous female was considered essential.

"First of all, it is vitally important that the natives consider us harmless tourists, foolish perhaps to spend time on a boat in these waters in the pursuit of darkening our pale skins by lying for hours on deck. Foolish but essentially harmless.

"To establish this idea in their minds, you and Elsa will be seen on deck seriously taking the sun. You will also be observed swimming off the side of the boat." He scraped at a nail. "Just stupid harmless tourists."

During this recital, Elsa's eyes were adding activities we could indulge in on our own; away from the prying eyes of Mueller and the natives. I heartily agreed with the message her eyes sent.

"After establishing our innocence," Mueller examined his nails again. "Then we get down to the serious work of bringing up the treasure." And he outlined his plan for sneaking past the native patrols. The plan was simple and ingenious.

Everything went like clockwork. Elsa and I sunbathed and swam during the day, and during the tropical nights we made love. She was magnificent in bed; eager, impassioned and expert. Her hunger and desire easily matched mine, and the long warm nights passed much too quickly for both of us.

Because we displayed no interest in the underwater caves, the native patrols which came aboard to look us over soon accepted us as the foolish tourists Mueller insisted we were.

After passing the patrol hurdle I started work in earnest. Bit by bit I got my gear downstairs. The U-boat sat tilted at an angle that made access to her compartments fairly easy. I found one compartment that even had trapped air inside. And I soon located the treasure chests. But slipping past the native patrols continued to be nerve wracking.

I'd managed to get one chest up on deck and had just returned with the second when all hell ripped loose about the gold. It wasn't in the chests. Mueller's rage led to that fiasco of accusing Elsa of removing the gold. That idiocy was the direct cause of Elsa's plight now. She had only seconds to live as I dived downward with the torch in my hand. Fortunately I still wore my scuba equipment.

The murky light underwater made it difficult to find her right away but I spotted the anchor and went to where she struggled against her bonds. Desperately I raced against time, stopping now and then to put the life giving scuba mask over Elsa's face to give her a chance to breathe. It was slow work but I hurried between breaths and when the ropes were cut I dragged her inside the submarine to the compartment which held the air.

I braced her against the bulkhead with my body and gave her mouth to mouth resucitation. She responded very quickly and grinned shakily. She was a game one all right.

Soon I said, "We've got to get out of here. This air can't last more than a few minutes and we'd better conserve the scuba tanks in case we have to do more underwater swimming to get away."

She nodded. I didn't tell her we'd probably face a life and death struggle when we did surface. Mueller would be waiting for us.

We surfaced near starboard. The schooner was eerily quiet. No sounds at all. We climbed silently aboard.

Elsa's scream warned me. Whirling about I faced Heinrich who circled me cautiously with hate filled eyes. I ducked his hastily thrown punch and put my own into his solar plexus. He buckled, gasping and I gave him a side of the hand blow to the back of his neck cracking the top vertebra. That put him out of commission.

Max lay stiff and cold beside the port railing. He must have breathed some of the flame from the torch I thrust in his face. That left Elsa and me alone on deck. I turned to her.

"By the way, what did happen to that gold?" I said.

She grinned. "I moved it. Sneaked down one night with your scuba gear." She slid her arms up my sides. "After all we deserved that gold much more than Heinrich ever did. He was only a surviving Nazi from the sub. If you're good to me I might tell you where it is." Her mouth closed over mine.

But we didn't get a chance to go after the gold right then. Natives swarmed over us and insisted that we leave their waters. According to their spokesman, the death of Mueller had so defiled their god's resting place that no outsider would be permitted in these waters for at least a year.

But Elsa and I will go back. I'm only sorry we have no charts for the region. The charts were all in Mueller's head. We have the schooner and the log, though and we'll make good use of that year. I intend to get that gold. ●● their lives.

"But how did they get into this mess?" I wanted to know.

THE STUDIO HEAD SHRUGGED. "It's the old story. Girls come out here, make a pitch to get into the movies and don't get anywhere for months or even years. All they hear is 'Don't call us; we'll call you.' Eventually, some character offers them a job in the nudies. They figure, what the hell, they don't have any career to protect and the way it looks they never will. And they still have to eat. So, they sign up. If they find out that what they signed for isn't even a legit nudie but a pornographic film for the stag market, it's too late. They're too much involved to back out."

The man poured out a drink from his well-stocked bar and then went on. "All right. A few more years go by. It begins to look like they are going to have a career in motion pictures, after all. They tell the nude movie people good-by and even offer to buy up their old films. The gang lets them buy anything they want. What they don't know is that there's a secret negative locked away in the files. If they ever become real stars, the gang is ready to gouge them for whatever they have.

"It's one of the dirtiest blackmail schemes I know—and one of the most successful."

"As bad as that," I said.

The studio head nodded. "Not only here, but at all the other companies, as well. If they're not stopped, these people can wreck an entire industry and everyone associated with it!"

"And you want me to stop them?"

"Exactly."

I did some fast thinking. The more I considered the deal, the less I liked it. It seemed like just too big a job for a lone-wolf operator like myself. "Why don't you send them to the police?" I asked. "Or at least to one of the large detective agencies?"

"Let's say I did call in the police. How long do you think it would be before the story leaked to the press? And as far as the big agencies are concerned—they're apt to be a little squeamish about taking the direct approach, if you get my meaning." He looked at me, levelly.

I knew exactly what he meant, and I didn't like it. I might have cut a few corners in the past, but I never went out of my way to use strong-arm tactics and I did have a license to protect.

The studio head heard me out patiently. "Listen," he said, when I was through, "these aren't men I'm talking about. They're vermin. Three weeks ago they drove one woman to suicide, and there'll be more deaths if something isn't done to put them out of business."

I WINCED. It wasn't hard to figure out the name of the actress he was talking about. It was one of Hollywood's most promising young stars—a girl who seemed to have everything to live for. Her mysterious death from an overdose of sleeping pills had set the rumor mills to work, and I doubt if the buzzing will die down for years to come. But nobody had a hint as to the real reason for the tragedy.

I made up my mind qickly. If I could do something about these creeps, I didn't have any choice except to go ahead.

I didn't kid myself that it would be easy. To put this gang out of business, I had to somehow destroy their master files. I had to somehow get enough evidence on them to put them away for good if they ever raised their slimy heads again. And all this had to be done without implicating or even contacting their victims!

The first step was to locate the gang, find out who the real boss was and somehow get in contact with him.

A tall order. But luckily there was one gimmick in my bag of tricks that might help me fill it.

When I first came to this town, I had worked for some time as a professional cameraman. Right now, I was rusty at this work. But I figured that with a little practice I'd be good enough to work for the nude movie gang.

For the next few weeks I was given a brush-up course at one of the studios, and then was ready to make use of some underworld contacts.

I was in luck. The gang was looking around for a good cameraman who could be trusted to keep his mouth shut. I let the word get out that I was a photographer from the East who'd been mixed up with a pornographic film racket in Europe. Before long, I was being interviewed by Big Bill Henshaw, who introduced himself as a producer and director of "exotic" films.

Henshaw liked my work. I would take orders, and I let him know that I'd been around long enough not to give him any back-talk. Pretty soon he took me off the regular commercial nudies and assigned me to the stag movie specials.

"THESE ARE THE FILMS we make our real dough from," he said in an expansive mood. "And if you keep playing it smart you can latch onto plenty of long green for yourself. There's lots around for everyone," he grinned.

"I'd like to return one of your salesgirls."

"Yeah?" I smiled back as though I didn't believe him. "There's not that much of a market for this sort of movie. There's dough here, but don't con me about how much."

Big Bill's grin was more of a leer, this time. "There's a lot you don't know, buddy. We only make part of our loot selling the films. We get most of our dough later on—for not selling them!"

"What do you mean?" I asked.

But he clammed up, then, and looked unhappy that he had said as much as he did.

I didn't press him. I'd already learned that I was on the right track with this outfit. And now I knew something else. Henshaw may have liked to play the bigshot, but he didn't have the brains or savvy to run the gang. There was somebody else, a Mr. X, who did Henshaw's thinking for him.

Some of the movies I had to make made me want to vomit, but I forced myself to play it cool and be a good little boy. Gradually, it began to pay off. Henshaw began trusting me to make some stills from old movies. They were pretty disgusting shots and I could recognize the women involved.

"What do you want these for?"

Big Bill glared me into silence. "That's my business," he said. "Keep your nose clean, stop asking questions and you'll learn soon enough."

I shrugged and held my peace.

All this time I was finding out as much as I could about the layout. I was pretty sure I knew where they kept the negatives of the old films. In the cellar of the barn-like building which served as a studio there was a large vault. I figured that if I could ever get inside that vault, I'd find what I was looking for.

THEN EVERYTHING SEEMED to break at once. Henshaw told me that the big boss was going to drop in after that day's shooting. "He wants to bring you into things," Henshaw said, expansively. "He's real impressed with what I had to say about you and he's going to make you a full fledged member of our operation."

I couldn't let things go wrong now. It was the day that we were shooting the scene with Betty Claviere—and it was why Betty had to take what was coming.

tered the smile back on her face and marched over to the bed again.

"Roll 'em," Henshaw commanded, and I turned my equipment back on to catch Frank Greyson paw over her helpless body. Let the slob have his fun, I thought, grimly. It'll be his last call for this sort of "acting."

Finally, they were through. The scene was finished and the girl sank back, exhausted.

I stopped the cameras and the electrician turned the bright lights off. Now, Betty was free to sob all she wanted.

Henshaw motioned for me to follow him off the set and down stairs. Three men were waiting for us. I noticed them earlier, but they were standing at the back of the studio and I could not make out their faces. Now I could—and my eyes nearly popped out of my head.

It was easy to guess which one of the three my Mr. X was. Standing in the middle of the three was Niels Carter—one of the biggest underworld kingpins on the West Coast.

I can't say how many times I'd seen that evil looking face of his in police Rogues Galleries. The cops were sure that he had his finger in every rotten pie in California. But so far, nobody had come up with the evidence needed to put him in stir where he belonged.

"You're Revell?" Carter asked me.

"Yeah."

"I heard some good things about you from Henshaw."

Henshaw came over with a smile. "He's a good man, all right, Mr. Carter."

"Is he?" Carter said softly. Something in his tone made my muscles bunch under my clothes. I tensed myself for action, but then noticed that Carter's men were standing on either side of me. They slipped their arms under mine. "Take it easy," they said.

IF HENSHAW HAD ANY IDEA that something was up, he never showed it. He kept smiling and nodding his head like a big, ugly dog waiting to be tossed a bone. What he got was an open-handed slap across his mouth that sent him reeling back, the blood spurting out of his cut lip!

"What . . . what was that for . . .?" he asked, a look of hurt astonishment coming over his face.

"You jerk! You sub-moron!" Niels Carter fairly spit the words at him. "He's a good man, is he? He's really one of us, is he? You want to know what he really is?" Carter said, spinning the big man around so that he faced me. "He's a lousy private eye! That's what he is!"

Henshaw looked as though he wanted to kill me. "I . . . I didn't know," he sputtered at his boss.

"Of course you didn't know. Because you're too damn stupid. But I took the trouble to check up on him. He's a stinking private snooper who's probably got enough on you to send you to jail for the rest of your life." He turned his back on Henshaw for a few moments, then whipped around again. "What do you think we ought to do with him?" he asked.

Henshaw saw his chance to get himself back in Carter's good graces and take his revenge on me at the same time. "Let me at him first, Mr. Carter. I'll take him apart for you. Then we can dump him some place with a bullet in his brain—that is, if I ain't already killed him."

The big man was practically whining to get at me. Carter shrugged his shoulders. "Why not? Make sure you got his gun," he told the men who were guarding me. "And then let him go."

Big Bill Henshaw lowered his head and came at me, bellowing like a bull. I stepped to one side and gave him a sharp kick in the knee cap so that his roars turned into high-pitched screams. Then, while he was still hopping around, clutching his aching knee, I gave him a judo chop across the Adam's apple and he couldn't make any sound at all.

Henshaw's face was a twisted mask of agony. He made a gagging, retching sound and his whole body began to sag. He was only half way down when I brought my foot up in a short arc that smashed his jaw-bone like it was made of brittle china.

"Hold it!"

I TURNED TO SEE three ugly looking automatics pointed directly at my head. I stepped back and the three men slowly put their guns back in their pockets.

Carter chuckled softly at the sight of the ruined Henshaw. "I wanted you to teach him a lesson for me," he said. "I don't want him dead. He can be too useful. Maybe next time, he'll be more careful about what he brings me.

"As for you," Carter went on, his face changing aagin. "I'll have you finished off inside my film vault. No one will hear a shot coming from there, and we can decide what to do with your body, later."

"You think of everything," I said.

"I do." He turned his back and went to work on the combination. His men had my arms pulled back tightly so that they could propel me inside as soon as the door was open. I knew I had to do something fast—or I'd never be able to do anything else, again.

The moment I heard the lock snap open, I moved. I ground my heel into the instep of the man on my right side. I could hear the bones snapping as he screamed and let go. In the same motion, I pivoted, hunched over and threw an upraised knuckle into the other creep's solar plexus. He sagged as if his muscles had become disconnected from his brain. I snatched the gun from his pocket and threw myself flat.

It was a good thing that I did. A blast belched out of Niels Carter's gun and the bullet whined over the spot where my head had been.

I fired back, not at Carter's head but at his belly. I wasn't especially interested in killing him. But if he did die, I wanted him to suffer the tortures of the damned, first.

Carter grabbed his middle and slumped to the ground, writhing.

I wheeled around to check on the other two. The man whose foot I'd smashed was trying to bring his gun out. I kicked it away from him and put him out of his pain with a boot to the base of his skull. The other jerk was still holding his bread-basket, but I clipped him behind the ear, anyway, just to make sure he didn't do anything foolish.

It took me the better part of an hour to collect Carter's prize blackmail film and burn it in the incinerator. When I was through, none of his victims would have to worry about their pasts catching up with them.

Then I went through the outfit's books in order to have enough evidence to give the police.

The ambulance I phoned for arrived in time, and Carter and his crew recovered to face trial. Today they are all serving nice, stiff terms.

I don't say that my town is lily-white, now. Hollywood could never be that. But somehow the air seems to smell cleaner with this blackmail ring out of the way. ●●

After that, the whole village would fall on one another in one great communal orgy. But before that point was reached Lisa would be dead. I had to do something fast before they dropped her.

The rape was part of the tribe's fertility rites. Lisa had told me about the rites on our way into the jungle but neither of us had any inkling at that time that we'd be helpless victims of the rite.

I'd known Lisa and her brother, Bob Sanders, ever since we'd lived next door to each other as kids back in Dubuque. She'd been a scrawny, tom-boy tag-along after Bob and me. When we were about sixteen the Sanders family moved out of the state and I lost track of them. I heard later her brother had become an anthropologist. So it was fun but unexpected running into Lisa again after all those years. It was unexpected because we were both in Valparaiso which is pretty far from Dubuque, after all. But it was fun because the scrawny parts of Lisa's anatomy had turned into ripe, rounded curves and the freckles had disappeared altogether.

After catching up on past history and why she was in Valparaiso where she was waiting to join her brother on his return from a field trip, we got around to why I was in that part of the world.

I'm a ship's cook and good enough to be in demand. But I left my last ship when it docked in Chile. I was fed-up with the captain always butting into my galley so I decided to spend a month or so on the beach soaking up the sun before finding another ship.

Lisa's superstructure made me glad I'd left the ship. She seemed equally pleased to find a playmate and old buddy from home. It wasn't too long before she was spending her nights in my hotel room. They were wonderful nights. Lisa was sweet and eager with a sensuous body that responded quickly to anything I cared to try. I began to wish her brother would stay away longer.

But the date for his return came and he didn't show up. Neither did any of his native guides. Lisa became very worried and depressed. I tried to reassure her but she was positive that something had happened to him. The natives he'd chosen to study on this trip were extremely hostile to white men. The fact that he'd been in similar situations with unfriendly natives before did nothing to persuade her that he'd make it out of the jungle okay.

"I'm going in after him," Lisa said one night.

"Lisa! Don't be so foolish. You're not trained for the jungle. You couldn't make it through one day."

She raised her chin defiantly. On any other brunette that defiant gesture might be an empty threat but I felt sure that with Lisa the defiance merely underlined her determination to go into the jungle despite the foolhardiness of the whole idea.

"I have to go. He may be ill . . . or a captive . . . or . . ." She burst into tears.

"Lisa, Lisa. Don't cry," I said cradling her in my arms. "Oh hell! Okay, we'll go after him. We'll get the best guides and we'll find him. Don't worry baby."

It took a week to get all the necessary jungle gear for the trip and to round up competent guides. Most guides refused to accompany us when they discovered our destination. Although the men feared nothing about the jungle, all were reluctant to have any contact with the natives we sought. Their fear chilled me and reinforced my doubt of the sanity of exposing Lisa to such a hazardous trip. But since she was absolutely determined to make the journey I felt that she'd be better off with me alongside. So one fine day exactly four weeks after the date Bob Sanders was due back we set off with guides and gear into the jungle.

Our first week on the trail was eventful for Lisa and me as greenhorns but our guides considered the events routine. Those first days were marked by an encounter with jaguars, loss of half our food and liquor supplies, steaming stifling heat and clouds of blood-hungry mosquitoes that ate us alive.

However, we suffered through it until we got within two days journey of our goal. Our guide began showing increasing nervousness and at noon of that first day the two boys carrying our supplies dumped the gear in the middle of the trail and lit out for Valparaiso.

The next morning we found our guide dead. His throat was slit from ear to ear. Propped against his left foot was a tiger's paw dripping blood but it was the talisman we sought. The bloody paw left no doubt in our minds as to the killer of our guide.

An unnatural hush had settled on the jungle. Nothing stirred. No air moved the foliage. No bird or animal sounds broke the eerie silence. Always before in camp we'd been driven nuts with shrill bird calls and screaming monkeys. Uneasily Lisa and I glanced about us at the wall of green. Then as if by a prearranged signal the underbrush began to move and bushy-haired natives with bones piercing their noses suddenly surrounded us. They carried wicked spears and the leader of the group had a tiger skin draped over his shoulders. They were the natives we had entered the jungle to find.

Some of them began pawing through our gear. They seemed much taken with all the bottles they found. They would hold them up to the light, turn them back and forth watching fascinated as the liquid swirled from one end to the other. Our clothing and other rations they dumped on the ground and trampled into the dirt. With much guttural mumblings and hand waving the natives indicated we were to march ahead of them. We did so with alacrity not wishing to infuriate those walking just behind us with their poisoned spears pointed at our backs.

At midday we walked into their village. Immediately we were surrounded by swarms of chattering men, women and children. We saw a huge pit in the center of the compound and above it dangled a rope which was suspended from a tree off to the left.

There was no sign of Lisa's brother. We were marched into a foul-smelling hut and by use of sign language the natives made it plain we were not to come out. The guard outside the hut reinforced the message.

As darkness settled over the village Lisa and I huddled together trying to stay warm. Gradually we became aware of a hissing sound. We realized it was a human voice whispering over and over, "Lisa! Lisa!"

It was Bob in the hut adjoining ours.

But our excitement at learning he was alive faded rapidly next day when the priests separated us. Bob was hauled off and tied spread eagled between two young saplings. While Lisa was dragged from the hut and readied for the rape ceremony. I was beaten with spear butts and dragged to the huge cauldron where I had to keep the fire going.

As they suspended Lisa over the pit I wracked my brain for a way of saving her. It was then I saw the stack of whiskey bottles near the pile of wood for the fire. I knew they would soon be drinking the evil-smelling brew and then they would drop Lisa to the tiger-men. Quickly I got the bottles and emptied them all into the cauldron but keeping the fire away so the alcohol would not evaporate. I built the fire around the outpost of the pot so that it looked good but no heat really got to the pot.

It worked and I had hardly dumped in the last of the whiskey when the drinking began. The natives were not used to the strong alcohol and they began to pass out in droves. But the tiger-men didn't drink quite enough to put them out completely and when I cut Bob's bonds they attacked us. At least Bob was free now and the odds were a little better.

The tiger men came at us with their poisoned spears and metal claws but we kept the cauldron between us and their drunkenness made their aim with the spears bad. They came tearing around the cauldron to attack us with their claws when Bob and I grabbed the empty whiskey bottles and smashed them across the skulls of the evil priests. The bottles broke leaving us jagged necks in each hand and with these we were more effective than the drunken priests and their claws of metal. We made short bloody work of them but we were pretty cut up from their claws ourselves. There was one left and I whirled as Bob shouted. He came at me with his spear and I ducked beneath it slashing his face with the broken bottle. He screamed and I tore the spear from his grasp burying the blade in his belly. With the spear we cut Lisa down and lost no time getting out of there.

It was a hellish trip back but Bob was familiar with the jungle and we made it safely to where we could get friendly natives to help us and where we could recuperate before we finally returned to Valparaiso. It took us five weeks to get out but we actually enjoyed the last few weeks because we had food and comforts.

Bob was very gracious and generous in his thanks. But Lisa's way of saying thanks was much better and more private. After a little while we decided to make that arrangement permanent. ●●

FRESH WATER TREASURE TROVE

Shortly before World War I the first salvage attempt was made. Captain Persons, who was employed by the Lighthouse Department at Thunder Bay Island, directed the salvage crew to the exact location, a gap between Thunder Bay Island and Crooked Island 12 miles due east from Alpena, Michigan. Only fifty-five tons of copper were removed, but the divers were able to enter the staterooms and recover wallets and money, briefcases, jewelry, silver, watches, and many other articles of value.

The Pewabic still lies in the same position, and she still has on board the greater portion of her cargo of copper. Its present value is in excess of $150,000. It's yours if you want it, and the best time to go after it would be the summer months because of the strong currents in this area.

However, to recover any sunken treasure in the Great Lakes area you will have to learn to skin dive. This is not difficult, nor is Aqua-lung equipment expensive or complicated. But it can be dangerous to dive without any previous training. Your first time under the surface of the water will be an experience you will never forget—it really is "another world"—but it can also be a disaster if you do not acquaint yourself with a few basic Do's and Don'ts.

For every 33 feet of water the diver descends he is subjected to an additional pressure of one atmosphere, 14.7 pounds per square inch. When you are one hundred feet down the pressure on your body is four times what it would be on the surface of the earth. But the Aqua-lung which feeds air to you under pressure equalizes the pressure throughout the whole body and the water doesn't exert a crushing effect.

Experienced divers will instruct you to blow your nose before putting on your face mask. You should never jump into the water, but enter it slowly feet first and pause for a moment when you are beneath the surface to accustom yourself to the feeling of being under water. Before you enter the water choose a spot where it will be easy to get out—remember it is always easier to enter the water than to get out of it. You must learn exactly how many weights you will need to enable you to stay at the depth where you wish to work. These weights should always be on a belt which you can release quickly if you have to.

The beginning diver should always go down on a life line so that in case of an emergency he can be pulled to the surface. Do not discard the life line until you have full confidence in your ability to surface without it. The beginning diver should never go deeper than 20 feet until he has gained experience and confidence. Remember that the deeper you go and the faster you move the faster you will use up your air supply. The one cylinder Aqua-lung will give you about 40 minutes at a depth of 10 to 12 feet. The large twin-cylinder model is good for one hour and twenty minutes. Check your pressure gauge frequently to see how much air you have left and start your ascent in plenty of time.

If you are going to dive in the Great Lakes and recover the treasure that lies on the bottom you are going to have to learn two important things: First, never panic, no matter what happens. If you stay down too long by accident jettison your weights and swim calmly and slowly to the surface. The closer you get to the surface the easier you will find it to breathe. Secondly, you will have to plan ahead. For instance, if you go below 60 feet then you should not dive again for six hours. Also, you must know how long you can stay at that depth, and that will depend on your air supply. Treasure hunting can be profitable, as well as a great adventure, but you must know what you are doing.

Not all tales of buried or lost treasure are true. Some of them have been passed along by word of mouth for hundreds of years. For instance there is supposedly a schooner with $5,000,000 in gold on board which was lost off the point of Little Bay de Noc early in the 1800's. But there is no record of the loss, no record of the ship, nor of its cargo. Until someone comes up with some definite evidence it is probably better to discredit these "fairy stories" and stick to the facts.

There are plenty of actual locations, known to historians, geographers, and map makers. There are so many, literally, that it is impossible to list them all here.

However, the "bible" of the Great Lakes wrecks is three volumes, written by Captain Dana T. Bowen: Shipwrecks of the Lakes, Lore of the Lakes, Memories of the Lakes. There is a vast amount of factual information in these books for the serious treasure hunter and it will be a purchase that will repay him many times over.

Here are some of the wrecks of the greatest value, their locations, and the dates on which they were sunk.

Erie. $100,000 in cash. August 9, 1841, off Silver Creek, N.Y., in Lake Erie.

Atlantic. $60,000 in gold. November 10, 1852, off Long Point, Ontario, in Lake Erie.

Dakatah. $500,000 in copper. November 10, 1860, near Long Point, Ontario, in Lake Erie.

Lexington. $300,000 in gold and more than 100 barrels of whisky. June 11, 1846, off Point Moullie, Lake Erie.

R. G. Coburn. $100,000 in gold, $75,000 in copper. October 17, 1871, off Harbor Beach, Lake Huron.

City of Detroit. $100,000 in gold, $100,000 in copper. September 21, 1873, two miles due north of Barcelona, N.Y., in Lake Erie.

G. R. Griffin. $525,000 of copper. June 6, 1896, two miles north of Lorain, Ohio, in Lake Erie.

Charles S. Price. $360,000 in copper. November 12, 1913, at the mouth of the St. Clair River.

Regina. Copper worth $235,000. Sunk November 12, 1913, off Hammond Bay, Lake Huron.

Dean Richmond. $141,000 in gold, $50,000 worth of zinc. August 19, 1893, two miles north of Erie, Pa., in Lake Erie.

Cleveco. $271,000 worth of fuel oil. It sank December 2, 1942, northeast of Avon Point, Ontario, in Lake Erie. The ship is now in 90 feet of water, bottom side up, and the oil is intact.

William B. Davock. Hard coal worth $425,000. November 11, 1940. One and one half miles south of Pentwater, Lake Michigan.

Anna Minch. $375,000 worth of coal. It sank in a collision with the William B. Davock, same date, same position.

Westmoreland. $100,000 in gold and 100 barrels of whisky. It sank sometime in November, 1865, north of North Manitou Island, Lake Michigan.

Anthony Wayne. $100,000 in gold. Sank in 1850, off Buffalo, New York, in Lake Erie.

New Brunswick. Lumber worth $173,000. August 6, 1912, between Point Pelee and Lorain, Ohio, in Lake Erie.

James B. Colgate. $200,000 in coal. January 20, 1916, off Long Point, Ontario, in Lake Erie.

These locations are known and authenticated. These are not "fairy stories" or myths or old wives' tales—the treasure is there, awaiting you and your recovery of it. It has been estimated that there is more than a billion dollars on the bottom of the Great Lakes. And Lake Erie which is the best bet for a beginner since it is the shallowest and warmest has over three hundred million dollars awaiting the treasure hunter. All you need is an Aqua-lung, a small boat, and a metal locater which will tell you exactly where the wreck is.

But if you are seriously interested in treasure hunting perhaps you are hesitant because you feel you might look foolish and might be subjected to ridicule by your friends. After all, everyone has heard stories of lost mines, buried pirate gold, or a miser's hoard which men have spent their lives looking for without ever finding. These men have become local characters, who are not quite right in the head. And of course you do not want to become one of them.

You won't, if you check your information thoroughly before you start out, and more than that you will find a way of life that you never dreamed existed before. The fascination of swimming with an Aqua-lung one hundred feet down is almost impossible to describe . . . as the hulk lying on the lake floor suddenly looms ahead of you, little shivers will run down your spine. At that moment the treasure itself becomes almost unimportant; you are alone in a vast stillness with something no other man has ever seen before. You discovered it. It is yours. And all your doubts and fears will vanish. You won't be concerned whether treasure hunting is profitable or not—you will have proved to yourself that it is one of the most profitable things you have ever done. And even as you enter what was once the captain's cabin and stumble across the safe or strongbox you will be thinking ahead to the next wreck, the next adventure, the next find of sunken treasure . . . and you will know then, without a doubt, that the treasure hunter's life is the life for you. ● ●

1) Do you brag to her about your earlier love conquests?

4) Are you jealous and bitter about her earlier boyfriends?
5) Do you make a scene when you see her talking with other men?
6) Do you stop her from dancing with other men at parties?
7) Do you leave her side immediately when your wants are satisfied?

1) Do you drink so much that you are insensible when the time comes for love-making?
2) Do you feel it is necessary for her to be "high" before she will be intimate with you?
3) Do you insist on abnormal practices in your love-making?

Part IV

Count 70 points for "always," 60 points for "usually," 40 points for "only rarely," zero points for "never."

Do you sometimes fail in your sexual function as a male?

Score IV . . . . . .

Now ADD scores II, III and IV . . . . . .

Write in Score I . . . . . .

Deduct above total . . . . . .

The difference gives you your Love Score . . . . . .

And here is how you rate as a lover

67-69—you are the perfect lover

57-59—you are almost perfect; a little effort and you've got it made

50-56—you are well above average and no woman has real cause to complain about you; if she doesn't want you, there is something wrong with her

35-49—you are about average as a lover; not that this is anything to brag about

25-34—you are below average and you should do something about it

24 and below—your case is not hopeless, but if you want to lead a healthy, normal love life, you should see a doctor or psychiatrist

DID YOU FIND YOU had a disappointing score? If so, you should learn more about women, for there is no reason why a healthy male should not be a good lover.

The biggest difficulty most men have is that they are impatient in a love situation. They tend to rush a girl—their wife or their sweetheart—into bed, and once under the covers they keep on rushing. Both are wrong.

A girl needs romance, flattery, attention. She wants to be sure that the man admires and adores her, that he is willing to make sacrifices for her, that he wants more from her than just sex thrills. A man can get excited just looking at a girl, or even the picture of a girl. Seeing the nude female figure —often only the expectation of seeing it, as in a strip tease—can make him physically ready for sexual contact. The promise of intimacy: a low-cut dress, a tight skirt, taut female flesh pressing to burst from bra and panties; any of these stimulants are enough to drive him wild with desire. But for a woman, this is not enough. She can look at a man in revealing boxer shorts and not give it a second thought, except maybe wondering if they are of nylon or cotton.

What a woman needs for sexual stimulation is body contact, kissing and petting; and before you can get even that far, she has to like you as a person and to feel that you like her the same way. Don't ever get the idea, from books, movies and TV, that silent, tough men are great lovers. Usually they don't get to first base. A girl wants to be talked to, danced with, treated as a lady by a man with whom she is proud to be seen in public before she allows him to love her in private. She likes to be taken out and be given presents, not just because she likes to go out and to have things, but because it proves to her that she is worth money to the man. She wants to be told that she is beautiful, that her clothes are stunning, her taste excellent, her new hairdo divine, and that her conversation is scintillating. In short, she wants to be courted—and courted as an equal at that.

NOW, ASSUMING THAT YOU have done all the proper things and have been sincere about them (it's all much easier then), and the lady is willing or seems to be. Then, if you are like most men, you'll start making your biggest mistakes.

After a few dates of kissing and mild-to-medium necking when the situation seems to be ripe—or for that matter on the night of the honeymoon—most men (actually 76 per cent, according to statistics) engage in the preliminaries only until there is no further resistance.

This is a big error. When love play has reached that point, the girl may be willing to take you as her lover but she is not yet ready to truly enjoy it. Most women, particularly young women with relatively little sexual experience, need love-making of increasing intensity for up to one hour before they are as excited as you were just seeing her in that clinging, transparent negligee. This takes patience, self-control and a thorough understanding of the female nervous system. (There are any number of popular medical works that can enlighten you on the subject of erogenous zones, the areas of sexual desire, women have a lot more of these than most men think, and not always in the most obvious places either.)

BUT EVEN THAT IS not enough. Women are just as concerned about what happens after making love as about what happened before or during. It takes her a lot longer to simmer down. So, again, great lovers have always been experts also at what is known as "after-play" which, essentially, is pretty much the same as the build-up except that it is even more

Yes, it even lets you look DOWN into rooms beneath you. We will let your own imagination trigger all the possible uses SPY-PEN has for you.

A PRECISION INSTRUMENT
SPY-PEN was developed by the German Secret Service during World War II and is being used by Interpol Agents today. Now an even more precise and improved model is being offered the public by the man from U.N.C.L.E. SPY-PEN has three precision ground optical quality lenses, not just two like competitive models, to afford an extreme wide angle field that lets you even see objects standing by the very wall through which you are observing.

PHOTOGRAPH THROUGH WALLS
SPY-PEN lenses have such sharp delineation that you can photograph right through it, sharply recording everything in the viewed area, all four walls, floor, and ceiling. Nothing escapes SPY-PEN.

BUILT-IN SECRET DRILL
Included in the SPY-PEN'S case is a secret drill that will attach to half the case and allow you to drill holes un-noticed even by people standing by the wall being penetrated. SPY-PEN needs only the smallest peep hole to put an entire room under surveillance.

CONVERTS TO POWERFUL TELESCOPE
Only SPY-PEN lets you close in telescopically on any item of interest. No other device has both these features, wide angle secret vision and close-up inspection.

CLIPS TO YOUR POCKET
SPY-PEN looks like an ordinary fountain pen in your pocket. Even if seen it will not be suspected as the incredible instrument with such amazing powers of penetration.

gentle and should lessen in intensity, and the more affectionate and sentimental it is the better women like it. After-play accomplishes two important goals: not only does it gratify the woman physically but it also assures her emotionally that her lover still loves her, and loves her even more, now that he has "had his way" and enjoyed her intimacy.

History's great lovers, like Don Juan who had some 300 adoring mistresses and more than twice as many brief affairs, have devoted pages in their memoirs to the pleasure they gave their women by handling them properly before and after and of the joys these happy women gave them in return.

But no matter how successfully you may have handled the girl of your love affair, you still do not rate as a lover if you can't keep her happy and eating out of your hand.

IT GOES WITHOUT SAYING that each succeeding sexual contact should be approached with the same care, consideration and concentration as the first; this gets easier too as time goes on because men learn quickly enough that their own joy is greater when they work at satisfying the girl instead of themselves. But that isn't enough either. There is more to life than bed and sex.

For one thing, high-rating lovers share other experiences with their wives and sweethearts: they go to shows together and to ballgames, to parties, dances, restaurants. And at all these occasions, great lovers treat their women as if there were no other women in the world. But at the same time they don't mind if their women talk to other men or dance with them. They are so sure of themselves they don't have to be jealous. They know that they are "number one."

And lastly, great lovers may write memoirs but they never talk about their loves. They know what happens between lovers is nobody else's business, and that women particularly are convinced that this joy is best when it is not shared in idle conversation.

WELL, YOU HAVE TAKEN the love test. Take it again after putting into the action these simple rules, and you'll find that your score will soar. There may be just one little problem: better be sure you really love the girl because she'll never let you go. That's one difficulty the great lovers have had since the dawn of history. ●● for the raid but we did not care about that. All we wanted was for the walls to be breached. We would do the rest. The bombing raid was promised for the 18th but the weather was bad and it did not come off. Then the weather cleared and London announced that they were bombing Rouen and warned all loyal Frenchmen to leave. We did not leave, of course but many others did and even the Germans were nervous though they tried to make the civilians stay in their homes. At night many slipped away and Rouen was practically empty the next day. It was noon before the bombers came and La Pistole and I were hiding in the house waiting and watching the prison walls when it started. It was that unlucky hit in the back of the house that wrecked it and set it afire.

When La Pistole put her gun on me and ordered me out of the house I pretended to go but in the smoke she could not see me well and I circled around through the debris and snatched the gun from her as she was about to turn it on herself. I ran into the street then, shouting for help and soon two of our resistance men were helping me free her. She was not hurt but her foot was caught in a small space between three boards. We couldn't wait to be careful. The two men held the weight of the debris up as I chopped the boards apart with my submachine gun. We pulled her out and made for the breach in the prison walls.

Resistance fighters were swarming through the breached walls and prisoners were swarming out. The Germans began to fire on the prisoners but the resistance fighters cut them down where they found them. La Pistole and I headed for the condemned prisoner's cell block at a wild run. It was not damaged much and the prisoners were beating on the bars trying to get their doors open. Two German guards were running along the corridor firing into the cells as we entered and I cut them into a bloody hash with my chopper. They sprawled on the corridor floor and I went through their pockets for keys but found none. La Pistole was shouting over the bedlam for Pepe. She found him in a cell at the end of the corridor and began blasting at the lock with her pistol. In seconds she had it open and was helping Pepe to walk while I blasted other locks and as prisoners were released they seized the dead guard's guns and helped free the others.

The firing outside was heavy as we left the building even though the bombing was still going on in the town. We fought our way out with the others and Pepe showed us the way to what seemed a sewer opening in back of the burning house where we'd hidden. It led to a deep cellar which was stocked with food and medicine. There was a radio there, too.

It took Pepe a month to recover and La Pistole and I stayed with him. We kept in contact with London and found the British Intelligence Officers had made it back there. We did not know it then but the bombing was really a D-day softening up and within two months the war was over for us.

It was only long after when Yvette and I were married that we found the bombing was called Operation Striptease in her honor. But that is behind us now. She is never called La Danseuse Sensuel or even La Pistole. She is happy being my wife and nothing more. I am happy to have it that way. ●●

Profits That Lie Hidden in America's Mountain of Broken Electrical Appliances

By J. M. Smith, President, National Radio Institute

And I mean profits for you—no matter who you are, where you live, or what you are doing now. Do you realize that there are over 700 million electrical appliances in the homes of America today? So it's no wonder that men who know how to service them properly are making $3 to $5 an hour—in spare time or full time! I'd like to send you a Free Book telling how you can quickly and easily get into this profitable field.

THE COMING OF THE AUTO created a multi-million dollar service industry, the auto repair business. Now the same thing is happening in the electrical appliance field. But with this important difference: anybody with a few simple tools can get started in appliance repair work. No big investment or expensive equipment is needed.

The appliance repair business is booming—because the sale of appliances is booming. One thing naturally follows the other. In addition to the 700,000,000 appliances already sold, this year alone will see sales of 80 million new appliances. For example, 6,500,000 new coffee makers, over 3,000,000 new room air conditioners, 1,400,000 new clothes dryers. A nice steady income awaits the man who can service appliances like these. And I want to tell you why that man can be you—even if you don't know a volt from an ampere now.

A Few Examples of What I Mean

Now here's a report from Earl Reid of Thompson, Ohio: "In one month I took in approximately $648 of which $510 was clear. I work only part time." And, to take a big jump out to Oregon, here's one from Oscar W. Wikman of Astoria: "I can't do hard manual labor. That's why I'm more than thankful for your appliance course. It actually put me back on my feet. I started a full-time repair shop half-way through the course and make as high as $30 some days."

Don't worry about how little you may now know about repair work. What John D. Pettis, of Bradley, Illinois, wrote to me is this: "I had practically no knowledge of any kind of repair work. Now I am busy almost all my spare time and my day off—and have more and more repair work coming in all along. I have my shop in my basement."

We Tell You Everything You Need to Know

If you'd like to get started in this fascinating, profitable, rapidly growing field—let us give you the home training you need. Here's an excellent opportunity to build up "a business of your own" without big investment—open up an appliance repair shop, become independent. Or you may prefer to keep your present job, turn your spare time into extra money.

You can handle this work anywhere—in a corner of your basement or garage, even on your kitchen table. No technical experience, or higher education is necessary. We'll train you at home, in your spare time, using methods proven successful for over 45 years. We start from scratch—tell you in plain English, and show you in clear pictures—everything you need to know. And, you will be glad to know, your training will cost less than 20¢ a day.
